able Theodore Sedgwick, one of the Representatives for the State of Massachusetts : Whereupon,

The said Theodore Sedgwick was conducted to the chair, from whence he made his acknowledgments to the House, as followeth :

"Gentlemen : Although I am conscious of a deficiency of the talents which are desirable to discharge with usefulness and dignity the important duties of the high station to which I am raised, by the generous regard of the enlightened and virtuous representatives of my country ; yet, reposing myself with perfect confidence on the energy of their candid support, I will not shrink from the attempt.

"Accept, I pray you, gentlemen, my grateful acknowledgment of the honor which you are pleased to confer, and with it an assurance that no consideration shall seduce me to deviate in the least degree from a direct line of impartial integrity."

The House proceeded, in the same manner, to the appointment of a Clerk, and, upon examining the ballots, a majority of the votes of the whole House was found in favor of Jonathan Williams Condy.

The oath to support the Constitution of the United States, as prescribed by the act, entitled "An act to regulate the time and manner of administering certain oaths," was administered by Mr. Rutledge, one of the Representatives for the State of South Carolina, to the Speaker, and then the same oath or affirmation was administered by Mr. Speaker to each of the Members present, to wit :

The same affirmation, together with the affirmation of office prescribed by the said recited act, were also administered by Mr. Speaker to the Clerk.

Ordered, That a message be sent to the Senate to inform them that a quorum of this House is assembled, and have elected the Honorable Theodore Sedgwick their Speaker; and that the Clerk of this House do go with the said message.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Otis, their Secretary :

Mr. Speaker : I am directed to inform this House that a quorum of the Senate is assembled, and ready to proceed to business, and that, in the absence of the Vice President, they have elected the Honorable Samuel Livermore President of the Senate pro tempore. And then he withdrew.

The House proceeded, by ballot, to the choice of a Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and Assistant Doorkeeper ; and, upon examining the ballots, an unanimous vote of the House was found in favor of Joseph Wheaton, as Sergeant-at-Arms, Thomas Claxton, as Doorkeeper, and Thomas Dunn, as Assistant Doorkeeper.

Ordered, That the said Joseph Wheaton, Thomas Claxton, and Thomas Dunn, do severally give their attendance accordingly.

The Speaker laid before the House a letter from John Trumbull, Esquire, a citizen of the United States, residing in England, presenting to the House of Representatives of the United States impressions of two prints, commemorative of certain events of the American Revolution, which he has published ; which was read, and ordered to lie on the table.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Otis, their Secretary :

Mr. Speaker : The Senate have appointed a committee on their part, jointly, with such committee as may be appointed on the part of this House, to wait on the President of the United States, and inform him that a quorum of the two Houses is assembled, and ready to receive any communications he may think proper to make to them. And then he withdrew.

The House proceeded to consider the said message of the Senate : Whereupon, Resolved, That this House do concur in the same.

Ordered, That Mr. Marshall, Mr. Rutledge, and Mr. Sewall, be appointed a committee on the part of this House for the purpose expressed in the message of the Senate.

Ordered, That the Clerk of this House do acquaint the Senate therewith.

The Speaker laid before the House a letter from William Godfrey, stating himself to be a citizen of the United States, and that he is detained and obliged to serve on board the Mars ship of war, belonging to the British, and praying the interposition of Congress to obtain his release.

Ordered, That the said letter be referred to the Secretary of State.

Ordered, That the Clerk of this House cause the Members to be furnished, during the present session, with three newspapers, printed in this city, such as the Members, respectively, shall chuse, to be delivered at their lodgings; provided they do not exceed the price at which subscribers, citizens of Philadelphia, are furnished with them.

Resolved, That the rules and orders of proceeding established by the late House of Representatives, shall be deemed and taken to be the rules and orders of proceeding to be observed in this House, until a revision or alteration of the same shall take place.

Mr. Marshall, from the Joint Committee appointed to wait on the President of the United States, and notify him that a quorum of the two Houses is assembled, and ready to receive any communications he may think proper to make to them, reported that the committee had, according to order, performed that service, and that the President signified to them that he would make a communication to both Houses of Congress to-morrow, at twelve o'clock, in the Representatives' Chamber.

And then the House adjourned until to-morrow morning eleven o'clock.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1799.

Another member, to wit : James A. Bayard, from Delaware, appeared, produced his credentials, and took his seat in the House ; the oath to support the Constitution of the United States being first administered to him by Mr. Speaker, according to law.

Ordered, That a message be sent to the Senate to inform them that this House is now ready to attend them in receiving the communication from the President of the United States, agreeably to his notification to both Houses yesterday ; and that the Clerk of this House do go with the said message.

The Clerk accordingly went with the said message, and being returned,

The Senate attended and took seats in the House ; when, both Houses being assembled, the President of the United States came into the Representatives' Chamber, and addressed them as followeth :

Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives :

It is with peculiar satisfaction that I meet the Sixth Congress of the United States of America. Coming from all parts of the Union, at this critical and interesting period, the members must be fully possessed of the sentiments and wishes of our constituents.

The flattering prospects of abundance, from the labors of the People, by land and by sea ; the prosperity of our extended commerce, notwithstanding interruptions occasioned by the belligerent state of a great part of the world ; the return of health, industry, and trade, to those cities which have lately been afflicted with disease ; and the various and inestimable advantages, civil and religious, which, secured under our happy frame of Government, are continued to us, unimpaired ; demand, of the whole American People, sincere thanks to a benevolent Deity, for the merciful dispensations of his providence.

But, while these numerous blessings are recollected, it is a painful duty to advert to the ungrateful return which has been made for them, by some of the People, in certain counties of Pennsylvania, where, seduced by the arts and misrepresentations of designing men, they have openly resisted the law directing the valuation of houses and lands. Such defiance was given to the civil authority as rendered hopeless all further attempts, by judicial process, to enforce the execution of the law ; and it became necessary to direct a military force to be employed, consisting of some companies of regular troops, volunteers, and militia, by whose zeal and activity, in co-operation with the judicial power, order and submission were restored, and many of the offenders arrested.

Of these, some have been convicted of misdemeanors; and others, charged with various crimes, remain to be tried.

To give due effect to the civil administration of Government, and to ensure a just execution of the laws, a revision and amendment of the judiciary system is indispensably necessary. In this extensive country it cannot but happen that numerous questions respecting the interpretation of the laws and the rights and duties of officers and citizens, must arise. On the one hand, the laws should be executed; on the other, individuals should be guarded from oppression. Neither of these objects is sufficiently assured under the present organization of the judicial department. I therefore earnestly recommend the subject to your serious consideration.

Persevering in the pacific and humane policy which had been invariably professed and sincerely pursued by the Executive authority of the United States, when indications were made on the part of the French Republic, of a disposition to accommodate the existing differences between the two countries, I felt it to be my duty to prepare for meeting their advances, by a nomination of Ministers upon certain conditions, which the honor of our country dictated, and which its moderation had given a right to prescribe. The assurances which were required of the French Government, previous to the departure of our Envoys, have been given through their Minister of Foreign Relations; and I have directed them to proceed on their mission to Paris. They have full power to conclude a treaty, subject to the Constitutional advice and consent of the Senate. The characters of these gentlemen are sure pledges to their country that nothing incompatible with its honor or interest, nothing inconsistent with our obligations of good faith or friendship to any other nation, will be stipulated.

It appearing probable, from the information I received, that our commercial intercourse with some ports in the island of St. Domingo, might safely be renewed, I took such steps as seemed to me expedient to ascertain that point: The result being satisfactory, I then, in conformity with the act of Congress on the subject, directed the restraints and prohibitions of that intercourse to be discontinued, on terms which were made known by proclamation. Since the renewal of this intercourse, our citizens, trading to those ports, with their property, have been duly respected, and privateering from those ports has ceased.

In examining the claims of British subjects, by the Commissioners at Philadelphia, acting under the sixth article of the treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation, with Great Britain, a difference of opinion, on points deemed essential, in the interpretation of that article, has arisen between the Commissioners appointed by the United States, and the other members of that Board, from which the former have thought it their duty to withdraw. It is sincerely to be regretted that the execution of an article produced by a mutual spirit of amity and justice, should have been thus unavoidably interrupted. It is, however, confidently expected that the same spirit of amity, and the same sense of justice in which it originated, will lead to satisfactory explanations. In consequence of the obstacles to the progress of the commission in Philadelphia, his Britannic Majesty has directed the Commissioners, appointed by him, under the seventh article of the treaty, relating to British captures of American vessels, to withdraw from the Board sitting in London: but with the express declaration of his determination to fulfil, with punctuality and good faith, the engagements which his Majesty has contracted by his treaty with the United States; and that they will be instructed to resume their functions, whenever the obstacles which impede the progress of the commission at Philadelphia shall be removed. It being, in like manner, my sincere determination, so far as the same depends on me, that, with equal punctuality and good faith, the engagements contracted by the United States in their treaties with his Britannic Majesty shall be fulfilled, I shall immediately instruct our Minister at London to endeavor to obtain the explanations necessary to a just performance of those engagements, on the part of the United States. With such dispositions on both sides, I cannot entertain a doubt that all difficulties will soon be removed, and that the two Boards will then proceed and bring the business committed to them, respectively, to a satisfactory conclusion.

The act of Congress relative to the seat of the Government of the United States, requiring that, on the first Monday of December next, it should be transferred from Philadelphia to the district chosen for its permanent seat, it is proper for me to inform you that the Commissioners appointed to provide suitable buildings for the accommodation of Congress and of the President, and for the public offices of the Government, have made a report of the state of the buildings designed for those purposes in the city of Washington; from which they conclude that the removal of the seat of Government to that place, at the time required, will be practicable, and the accommodations satisfactory. Their report will be laid before you.

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives :

I shall direct the estimates of the appropriations necessary for the service of the ensuing year, together with an account of the revenue and expenditure, to be laid before you. During a period in which a great portion of the civilized world has been involved in a war unusually calamitous and destructive, it was not to be expected that the United States could be exempted from extraordinary burthens. Although the period is not arrived when the measures adopted to secure our country against foreign attacks can be renounced, yet it is alike necessary to the honor of the Government and the satisfaction of the community, that an exact economy should be maintained. I invite you, gentlemen, to investigate the different branches of the public expenditure; the examination will lead to beneficial retrenchments, or produce a conviction of the wisdom of the measures to which the expenditure relates.

Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives :

At a period like the present, when momentous changes are occurring, and every hour is preparing new and great events in the political world; when a spirit of war is prevalent in almost every nation, with whose affairs the interests of the United States have any connection; unsafe and precarious would be our situation, were we to neglect the means of maintaining our just rights. The result of the mission to France is uncertain; but, however it may terminate, a steady perseverance in a system of national defence, commensurate with our resources, and the situation of our country, is an obvious dictate of wisdom: for, remotely as we are placed from the belligerent nations, and desirous as we are, by doing justice to all, to avoid offence to any, nothing short of the power of repelling aggressions, will secure to our country a rational prospect of escaping the calamities of war, or national degradation. As to myself, it is my anxious desire so to execute the trust reposed in me, as to render the People of the United States prosperous and happy. I rely, with entire confidence, on your co-operation in objects equally your care; and that our mutual labors will serve to increase and confirm union among our fellow citizens, and an unshaken attachment to our Government.

JOHN ADAMS.

UNITED STATES, December 3d, 1799.

The President of the United States then withdrew, and the two Houses separated.

On motion,

Ordered, That the speech of the President of the United States to both Houses, be committed to a Committee of the Whole House to-morrow.

And then the House adjourned until to-morrow morning eleven o'clock.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1799.

The House, according to the order of the day, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole House on the speech of the President of the United States to both Houses of Congress; and, after some time spent therein, Mr. Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Rutledge reported that the committee had, according to order, had the said speech under consideration, and come to a resolution thereupon; which he delivered in at the Clerk's table, where the same was twice read, and agreed to by the House, as followeth:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this committee that a respectful address ought to be presented by the House of Representatives to the President of the United States, in answer to his speech to both Houses of Congress, at the commencement of the present Session, containing assurances that this House will duly attend to the important objects recommended by him to their consideration.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Otis, their Secretary:

Mr. Speaker: The Senate have passed a resolution for the appointment of two Chaplains to Congress, of different denominations, for the present Session; one by each House, to interchange weekly; to which they desire the concurrence of this House. And then he withdrew.

The said resolution was then read, and agreed to by the House.

Ordered, That the Clerk of this House do acquaint the Senate therewith.

Ordered, That the Clerk of this House do acquaint the Senate therewith.

A message, in writing, was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. Shaw, his Secretary, as followeth:

Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

Two other members, to wit: from North Carolina, William Barry Grove; and from Virginia, Edwin Gray; appeared, produced their credentials, and took their seats in the House ; the oath to support the Constitution of the United States being first administered to them by Mr. Speaker, according to law.

A petition of Seth Nelson, attorney for Samuel Brown, a soldier in the fourth Massachusetts regiment, during the Revolutionary war with Great Britain, was presented to the House and read, praying compensation for services performed by the said Samuel Brown, which has not been received, owing to the failure of the paymaster of the said regiment.

Ordered, That the speech of the President of the United States to both Houses be committed to a Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

And then the House adjourned until Monday morning eleven o'clock.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1799.

Two other members, to wit : Josiah Parker and Robert Page, from Virginia, appeared, produced their credentials, and took their seats in the House ; the oath to support the Constitution of the United States being first administered to them by Mr. Speaker, according to law.

The Speaker laid before the House a letter from the Treasurer of the United States, accompanying his account of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys, from the thirtieth of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, to the thirtieth of June, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, inclusive ; also, his accounts of payments and receipts for the War and Navy Departments, from the thirtieth of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, to the thirtieth of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, inclusive ; which were read, and ordered to lie on the table.

The House, according to the order of the day, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole House on the report of the committee appointed to prepare an address in answer to the speech of the President of the United States to both Houses ; and, after some time spent therein, Mr. Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Dent reported that the committee had, according to order, had the said report under consideration, and directed him to report to the House their agreement to the same.

The said address being then read throughout at the Clerk's table,

Resolved, That this House doth agree to the same, in the words following, to wit :

To the President of the United States :

SIR : While the House of Representatives contemplate the flattering prospects of abundance from the labors of the people by land and by sea ; the prosperity of our extended commerce, notwithstanding the interruptions occasioned by the belligerent state of a great part of the world ; the return of health, industry, and trade, to those cities which have lately been afflicted with disease ; and the various and inestimable advantages, civil and religious, which, secured under our happy frame of Government, are continued to us unimpaired ; we cannot fail to offer up to a benevolent Deity our sincere thanks for these, the merciful dispensations of his protecting providence.

That any portion of the People of America should permit themselves, amid such numerous blessings, to be seduced by the arts and misrepresentations of designing men, into an open resistance of a law of the United States, cannot be heard without deep and serious regret. Under a Constitution where the public burthens can only be imposed by the People themselves, for their own benefit, and to promote their own objects, a hope might well have been indulged that the general interest would have been too well understood, and the general welfare too highly prized, to have produced, in any of our citizens, a disposition to hazard so much felicity, by the criminal effort of a part to oppose, with lawless violence, the will of the whole. While we lament that depravity which could produce a defiance of the civil authority, and render indispensable the aid of the military force of the nation, real consolation is to be derived from the promptness and fidelity with which that aid was afforded. That zealous and active co-operation with the judicial power, of the volunteers and militia called into service, which has restored order and submission to the laws, is a pleasing evidence of the attachment of our fellow citizens to their own free Government, and of the truly patriotic alacrity with which they will support it.

To give due effect to the civil administration of Government, and to insure a just execution of the laws, are objects of such real magnitude as to secure a proper attention to your recommendation of a revision and amendment of the judiciary system.

Highly approving, as we do, the pacific and humane policy which has been invariably professed, and sincerely pursued by the Executive authority of the United States; a policy which our best interests enjoined, and of which honor has permitted the observance; we consider as the most unequivocal proof of your inflexible perseverance in the same well chosen system, your preparation to meet the first indications on the part of the French Republic of a disposition to accommodate the existing differences between the two countries, by a nomination of Ministers on certain conditions, which the honor of our country unquestionably dictated, and which its moderation had certainly given it a right to prescribe. When the assurances thus required of the French Government, previous to the departure of our Envoys, had been given through their Minister of Foreign Relations, the direction that they should proceed on their mission was, on your part, a completion of the measure, and manifests the sincerity with which it was commenced. We offer up our fervent prayers to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe for the success of their embassy, and that it may be productive of peace and happiness to our common country. The uniform tenor of your conduct through a life useful to your fellow citizens and honorable to yourself, gives a sure pledge of the sincerity with which the avowed objects of the negotiation will be pursued on your part, and we earnestly pray that similar dispositions may be displayed on the part of France. The differences which unfortunately subsist between the two nations cannot fail, in that event, to be happily terminated. To produce this end, to all so desirable, firmness, moderation, and union at home, constitute, we are persuaded, the surest means. The character of the gentlemen you have deputed, and still more the character of the Government which deposes them, are safe pledges to their country that nothing incompatible with its honor or interest, nothing inconsistent with our obligations of good faith or friendship to any other nation will be stipulated.

We learn, with pleasure, that our citizens, with their property, trading to those ports of St. Domingo with which commercial intercourse has been renewed, have been duly respected, and that privateering from those ports has ceased.

With you, we sincerely regret that the execution of the sixth article of the treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation, with Great Britain, an article produced by a mutual spirit of amity and justice, should have been unavoidably interrupted. We doubt not that the same spirit of amity, and the same sense of justice in which it originated, will lead to satisfactory explanations; and we hear with approbation that our Minister at London will be immediately instructed to obtain them. While the engagements which America has contracted by her treaty with Great Britain, ought to be fulfilled with that scrupulous punctuality and good faith to which our Government has ever so tenaciously adhered; yet no motive exists to induce, and every principle forbids us to adopt, a construction which might extend them beyond the instrument by which they are created. We cherish the hope that the Government of Great Britain will disclaim such extension, and by cordially uniting with that of the United States, for the removal of all difficulties, will soon enable the Boards, appointed under the sixth and seventh articles of our treaty with that nation, to proceed, and bring the business committed to them, respectively, to a satisfactory conclusion.

The buildings for the accommodation of Congress and of the President, and for the public offices of the Government, at its permanent Seat, being in such a state as to admit of a removal to that District by the time prescribed by the act of Congress, no obstacle, it is presumed, will exist to a compliance with the law.

With you, sir, we deem the present period critical and momentous. The important changes which are occurring; the new and great events which are every hour preparing in the political world; the spirit of war which is prevalent in almost every nation with whose affairs the interests of the United States have any connection; demonstrate how unsafe and precarious would be our situation should we neglect the means of maintaining our just rights. Respecting, as we have ever done, the rights of others, America estimates too correctly the value of her own, and has received evidence, too complete, that they are only to be preserved by her own vigilance, ever to permit herself to be seduced by a love of ease, or by other considerations, into that deadly disregard of the means of self-defence, which could only result from a carelessness, as criminal as it would be fatal, concerning the future destinies of our growing Republic. The result of the mission to France is, indeed sir, uncertain. It depends not on America alone. The most pacific temper will not always ensure peace. We should, therefore, exhibit a system of conduct as indiscreet as it would be new in the history of the world, if we considered the negotiation happily terminated, because we have attempted to commence it, and peace restored, because we wish its restoration. But, sir, however this mission may terminate, a steady perseverance in a system of national defence, commensurate with our resources and the situation of our country, is an obvious dictate of duty. Experience, the parent of wisdom, and the great instructor of nations, has established the truth of your position, that remotely as we are placed from the belligerent nations, and desirous as we are, by doing justice to all, to avoid offence to any, yet nothing short of the power of repelling aggressions will secure to our country a rational prospect of escaping the calamities of war, or national degradation.

In the progress of the session we shall take into our serious consideration the various and important matters recommended to our attention.

A life devoted to the service of your country, talents and integrity which have so justly acquired, and so long retained, the confidence and affection of your fellow-citizens, attest the sincerity of your declaration that it is your anxious desire so to execute the trust reposed in you as to render the People of the United States prosperous and happy.

Resolved, That Mr. Speaker, attended by the House, do present the said address; and that Mr. Marshall, Mr. Rutledge, and Mr. Sewall, be a committee to wait on the President, to know when and where it will be convenient for him to receive the same.

The House, according to the standing order of the day, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union; and, after some time spent therein, Mr. Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Dent reported that the committee had, according to order, had the state of the Union under consideration, and come to several resolutions thereupon; which he delivered in at the Clerk's table.

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives :

This very respectful address from the Representatives of the People of the United States, at their first assembly after a fresh election, under the strong impression of the public opinion and national sense, at this interesting and singular crisis of our public affairs, has excited my sensibility, and receives my sincere and grateful acknowledgments.

As long as we can maintain, with harmony and affection, the honor of our country, consistently with its peace, externally and internally, while that is attainable ; or in war, when that becomes necessary, assert its real independence and sovereignty, and support the Constitutional energies and dignity of its Government, we may be perfectly sure, under the smiles of Divine Providence, that we shall effectually promote and extend our national interest and happiness.

The applause of the Senate and House of Representatives, so justly bestowed upon the volunteers and militia, for their zealous and active co-operation with the judicial power, which has restored order and submission to the laws, as it comes with peculiar weight and propriety from the Legislature, cannot fail to have an extensive and permanent effect, for the support of Government, upon all those ingenuous minds who receive delight from the approving and animating voice of their country.

“MOUNT VERNON, December 15, 1799.

“SIR : It is with inexpressible grief that I have to announce to you the death of the great and good General WASHINGTON. He died last evening, between ten and eleven o'clock, after a short illness of about twenty hours. His disorder was an inflammatory sore throat, which proceeded from a cold, of which he made but little complaint on Friday. On Saturday morning about three o'clock, he became ill : Doctor Craik attended him in the morning, and Doctor Dick, of Alexandria, and Doctor Brown, of Port Tobacco, were soon after called in. Every medical assistance was offered, but without the desired effect. His last scene corresponded with the whole tenor of his life ; not a groan, nor a complaint, escaped him in extreme distress. With perfect resignation, and in full possession of his reason, he closed his well-spent life.

“I have the honor to be, with the highest respect, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

A message, in writing, was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. Shaw, his Secretary, as followeth:

Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

In compliance with the request in one of the resolutions of Congress of the twenty-first of December last, I transmitted a copy of those resolutions by my Secretary, Mr. Shaw, to Mrs. Washington, assuring her of the profound respect Congress will ever bear to her person and character; of their condolence in the late afflicting dispensation of Providence; and entreating her assent to the interment of the remains of General GEORGE WASHINGTON, in the manner expressed in the first resolution. As the sentiments of that virtuous lady, not less beloved by this nation than she is at present greatly afflicted, can never be so well expressed as in her own words, I transmit to Congress her original letter.

It would be an attempt of too much delicacy to make any comments upon it; but, there can be no doubt that the nation at large, as well as all the branches of the Government, will be highly gratified by any arrangement which may diminish the sacrifice she makes of her individual feelings.

JOHN ADAMS.

UNITED STATES, January 6, 1800.

The letter referred to in the said message is as follows :

“ MOUNT VERNON, December 31, 1799.

Sir : While I feel, with keenest anguish, the late dispensation of Divine Providence, I cannot be insensible to the mournful tributes of respect and veneration which are paid to the memory of my dear deceased husband ; and, as his best services and most anxious wishes were always devoted to the welfare and happiness of his country, to know that they were truly appreciated and gratefully remembered, affords no inconsiderable consolation.

Taught, by that great example which I have so long had before me, never to oppose my private wishes to the public will, I must consent to the request made by Congress, which you have had the goodness to transmit to me ; and, in doing this, I need not, I cannot, say what a sacrifice of individual feeling I make to a sense of public duty.

With grateful acknowledgments, and unfeigned thanks for the personal respect and evidences of condolence expressed by Congress, and yourself, I remain, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

MARTHA WASHINGTON.”

The House proceeded to consider the report made, on Monday last, by the committee to whom was referred so much of the President's speech as relates to "a system of national defence, commensurate with our resources, and the situation of our country," which lay on the table; and the same being again read, in the words following, to wit:

"That, in the opinion of the committee, no such material change in the state of the foreign relations of the United States has happened, as would justify a relinquishment of any of the means of defence heretofore adopted by Congress, but that the national honor and interest in the present posture of affairs make it prudent and necessary to continue prepared for the worst event: but while danger still threatens our country, yet circumstances having diminished the probability of an immediate invasion, the attention of the committee has been particularly directed to the state of the Military establishment, with a view to reconcile safety with economy, to preserve the establishment, and retrench the expense. The annexed abstract and letter from the Secretary of War exhibit the state of the twelve new regiments of infantry, according to the latest returns. As these men have received their bounty and clothing, and are daily improving in discipline; as they would be useful in any sudden emergency, and the greater part of them may also be usefully employed, until wanted for actual service, on the fortifications of ports and harbors, it is conceived proper to retain them, but to suspend the recruiting service until the approach of danger shall compel the Government to resume it. This project combines the advantage of an important reduction of the national expense, with that of having at command a body of officers ready for service upon short notice, and a number of disciplined troops sufficient for the present occasion.

"The committee, therefore, submit the following resolution:

"Resolved, That, from and after the — day of — next, all enlistments under an act, entitled "An act to augment the Army of the United States, and for other purposes," shall be suspended until the next session, unless war should break out between the United States and a foreign European Power, or in case imminent danger of invasion of their territory by any such Power shall, in the opinion of the President of the United States, be discovered to exist:"

The question was taken that the House do agree to the resolution contained in the said report,

And resolved in the affirmative.

Ordered, That a bill or bills be brought in, pursuant to the said resolution, and that Mr. Otis, Mr. Nicholas, Mr. Edmond, Mr. Abiel Foster, Mr. Champlin, Mr. Waln, and Mr. Hill, do prepare and bring in the same.

On motion,

On motion,

Resolved, That the order for a call of the House this day, be dispensed with, and that there be a call of the House on Thursday next, at two o'clock.

The several orders of the day were further postponed until to-morrow.

And then the House adjourned until to-morrow morning eleven o'clock.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1800.

Mr. Griswold, from the Committee of Revisal and Unfinished Business, to whom it was referred to examine and report what laws of the United States have expired, or are near expiring, made a farther report, in part; which was read and considered. Whereupon,

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to prepare and report a bill to continue in force an act, entitled "An act providing the means of intercourse between the United States and foreign nations."

Ordered, That a bill or bills be brought in, pursuant to the said resolution, and that the Committee of Revisal and Unfinished Business do prepare and bring in the same.

Mr. Griswold, from the Committee of Revisal and Unfinished Business, to whom it was referred, on the thirteenth instant, to prepare and report a bill to continue in force, "An act declaring the consent of Congress to a certain act of the State of Maryland, and to continue an act declaring the consent of Congress to certain acts of the State of Maryland, Georgia, and Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, so far as the same respects the States of Georgia and Rhode Island," reported a bill declaring the assent of Congress to certain acts of the States of Rhode Island, Maryland, and Georgia; which was received, and read the first time.

On motion,

The said bill was read the second time, and ordered to be committed to a Committee of the Whole House on Monday next.

The House resumed the consideration of the report of the committee to whom was referred, on the fourteenth instant, the message of the President of the United States, together with a letter of John Randolph, jun. a member of this House for the State of Virginia; and the same being again read, in the words following, to wit:

"In executing the task assigned to them, it is with peculiar satisfaction your committee notice the respect shewn in his message by the President of the United States, to the rights and privileges of the House.

“On the style of the letter to the President, referred to the consideration of the committee, they forbear any other remark than to express their regret that a member of the House has conceived himself justified in deviating from the forms of decorum customary in official communications to the Chief Magistrate of the United States, justly due to his office and character, and essential to that harmony between the different branches of the Government, which should be circumspectly cherished by their respective members.

“In Mr. Randolph’s letter, he states that for words of a general nature, uttered in debate in the House of Representatives, on a proposition for reducing the Army, he had been publicly and grossly insulted by several persons, officers of the Army or Navy; and demands of the Executive authority, redress for an attack on his independence and rights as a legislator.

“Your committee being of opinion, that the matter of complaint respects the privileges of the House, inherent in its own body, and there exclusively cognizable, cannot but consider the appeal, in this instance, to the Executive authority, however otherwise intended, as derogating from those rights of the House with which are intimately connected both its honor and independence, and the inviolability of its members.

“Your committee further report, that, on inquiry, they found James M’Knight, Captain, and Michael Reynolds, Lieutenant of Marines, to be the persons implicated in Mr. Randolph’s charge: They, on notice, appeared before the committee, and denied the truth of the allegations. The committee have collected all the evidence they could find to be material in the case, and heard the parties accused, with their witnesses; and, although they believe a series of circumstances to have taken place at the Theatre, on the evening of Friday, the tenth instant, which appeared to Mr. Randolph, and others present, to evince premeditated insult towards him, yet, as some of those circumstances have been satisfactorily explained, and others are of a nature too equivocal to justify reprehension and punishment, your committee are of opinion that sufficient cause does not appear for the interference of the House, on the ground of a breach of their privileges.

“Your committee have taken the evidence in writing, which they submit to the consideration of the House, with the following resolutions:

“Resolved, That this House entertain a respectful sense of the regard which the President of the United States has shewn to its rights and privileges, in his message of the fourteenth instant, accompanied by a letter addressed to him by John Randolph, jun. a member of this House.

“Resolved, That, in respect to the charge alleged by John Randolph, jun. a member of this House, in his letter addressed to the President of the United States, on the eleventh instant, and by him submitted to the consideration of the House, that sufficient cause does not appear for the interposition of this House on the ground of a breach of its privileges.”

The question was taken that the House do agree to the first resolution contained in the said report,

And resolved in the affirmative.

The second resolution being under consideration, a motion was made and seconded to amend the same by inserting, before the word “sufficient,” in the fifth line, the words “although the conduct of Captain M’Knight, and Lieutenant Reynolds, was indiscreet and improper, yet,” and to insert, before the word “interposition” in the sixth line, the word “further:” Whereupon,

It was further moved and seconded to amend the said amendment, by inserting, after the word “improper” the words “and deserves reprehension:”

And the question being taken that the House do agree to the same,

It passed in the negative, { Yeas 42,

A motion was then made and seconded that the House do come to the following resolution, to wit:

Resolved, That this House do highly disapprove of the conduct of Captain M'Knight and Lieutenant Reynolds, towards John Randolph, a member of this House, on the evening of Friday, the tenth instant; but considering it as an indiscretion of youth, are unwilling to exercise their constitutional authority of punishment, under a hope that similar instances of misconduct will not occur in future: Whereupon,

Ordered, That the Clerk of this House do acquaint the Senate therewith.

On a motion made and seconded that the House do come to the following resolution, to wit:

"Resolved, That it appears to this House that a person calling himself Jonathan Robbins, and claiming to be a citizen of the United States, impressed on board a British ship of war, was committed for trial in one of the Courts of the United States, for the alleged crime of piracy and murder committed on the high seas, on board the British frigate Hermione. That a requisition being, subsequent to such commitment, made by the British Minister, to the Executive of the United States, for the delivery of the said person (under the name of Thomas Nash) as a fugitive under the twenty-seventh article of the treaty with Great Britain, the President of the United States did, by a letter written from the Department of State, to the Judge who committed the said person for trial, officially declare his opinion to the said Judge, that he 'considered an offence committed on board a public ship of war on the high seas, to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the nation to whom the ship belongs;' and in consequence of such opinion and construction, did advise and request the said Judge to deliver up the person, so claimed, to the agent of Great Britain who should appear to receive him: Provided, only, that the stipulated evidence of his criminality should be produced. That, in compliance with such advice and request of the President of the United States, the said person so committed for trial, was, by the Judge of the District Court of South Carolina, without any presentment or trial by jury, or any investigation of his claim to be a citizen of the United States, delivered up to an officer of his Britannic Majesty, and afterwards tried by a court martial and executed, on a charge of mutiny and murder.

"Resolved, That, inasmuch as the Constitution of the United States declares that the judiciary power shall extend to all questions arising under the constitution, laws, and treaties, of the United States, and to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; and, also, that the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the State where such crime shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, then at such place or places as Congress may by law have directed: And inasmuch as it is directed by law, that the offence of murder committed on the high seas shall be deemed to be piracy and murder, and that 'the trial of all crimes committed on the high seas, or in any place out of the jurisdiction of any particular State, shall be in the District where the offender is apprehended, or into which he may be first brought;' therefore the several questions whether the alleged crime of piracy and murder was committed within the exclusive jurisdiction of Great Britain; whether it comes within the purview of the said twenty-seventh article; and whether a person, stating that he was an American citizen, and had committed the act of which he was accused, in attempting to regain his liberty from illegal imprisonment, ought to be delivered up without any investigation of his claim to citizenship, or inquiry into the facts alleged in his defence, are all matters exclusively of judicial inquiry, as arising from treaties, laws, Constitutional provisions, and cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.

"That the decision of those questions by the President of the United States, against the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, in a case where those courts had already assumed and exercised jurisdiction; and his advice and request to the Judge of the District Court, that the person thus charged should be delivered up; provided only such evidence of his criminality should be produced as would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial, are a dangerous interference of the Executive with judicial decisions; and that the compliance with such advice and request on the part of the Judge of the District Court of South Carolina, is a sacrifice of the Constitutional independence of the judicial power, and exposes the administration thereof to suspicion and reproach."

Ordered, That the said motion be committed to the Committee of the Whole House to whom was committed the message of the President of the United States, of the seventh instant, transmitting the papers relative to the requisition for, and delivery of, Jonathan Robbins.

The several orders of the day were further postponed until to-morrow.

Ordered, That the Committee to whom were referred sundry petitions of persons residing on lands in the Northwestern Territory, between the Great and Little Miami Rivers, purchased from John Cleves Symmes, have leave to report by bill or bills, or otherwise.

Mr. Brace, from the committee last mentioned, made a report ; which was read, and ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. Brace, from the said committee, presented, according to order, a bill to provide for the disposition of the lands between the Great and Little Miami rivers ; which was received, and read the first time.

On motion,

The said bill was read the second time, and ordered to be committed to a Committee of the Whole House on Friday next.

Ordered, That the Committee of Claims be discharged from the further consideration of the petition of Alexander Spotswood, referred to them on the twenty-eighth of February last, and that the same be referred to the Committee of the Whole House to whom was committed, on the twenty-fifth of February last, the report of the Committee of Claims on the several petitions of Temple Elliot, of William Boyce, and of Simon Sommers.

The House, according to the order of the day, again resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole House on the report of the Committee of Claims, made the twenty-fifth of February last, on the several petitions of Temple Elliot, of William Boyce, and of Simon Sommers ; to which Committee of the Whole House was also referred the report of the Committee of Claims on the memorial of David Jones and William Rogers ; and, after some time spent therein, Mr. Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Rutledge reported that the committee had, according to order, again had the said reports under consideration, and directed him to report to the House their disagreement to the report of the Committee of Claims on the several petitions of Temple Elliot, of William Boyce, and of Simon Sommers ; and their agreement to the report on the memorial of David Jones and William Rogers.

The said report on the several petitions of Temple Elliot, of William Boyce, and of Simon Sommers, being then read in the words following, to wit :

“ That the several petitioners seek for grants of land from the United States, in consideration of services performed in the Army of the United States, in the Virginia line, during the Revolutionary war. A report on the said petition of Temple Elliot, was made upon the second of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and is herewith submitted. The committee are of opinion it would be proper for the House to agree to the said report.

“ The petitions of Mr. Boyce and Mr. Sommers are grounded on the same principles with those of Mr. Elliot, and the committee report that the same decision which shall be made on the petition of Mr. Elliot, should be applied to the others.

“ The Committee of Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Temple Elliot, heir of Thomas Elliot, late Colonel in the Army of the United States, report : That the petitioner states, that the said Thomas Elliot was a Colonel in the Virginia line of Continental troops, during the late war, and was induced to retire from service on account of the ill state of his health, at a period when he was not entitled to the bounty in lands engaged by law to certain officers and soldiers of the Continental Army. That, in consequence of his meritorious services, however, the State of Virginia, by a special resolve, on the sixteenth day of June, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-four, granted him a Colonel's bounty in lands, which lands the petitioner has, at considerable expense, had surveyed, platted, and located, in the tract reserved from the cession made by the State of Virginia to the United States, for the purpose of satisfying the grants of land made by said State to officers and soldiers of the Virginia line on Continental establishment, but that he cannot obtain patents for the same from the President of the United States, without the special interposition of Congress.

“ The committee find that, in the act of session which passed in the State of Virginia, on the twentieth of October, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, and which was accepted by Congress on the first day of March, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-four, there is the following clause :

“ ‘ That in case the quantity of good land on the Southeast side of the Ohio, upon the waters of Cumberland River, and between the Green River and Tennessee River, which have been reserved by law for the Virginia troops upon Continental establishment, should, from the North Carolina line bearing in further upon the Cumberland lands than was expected, prove insufficient for the legal bounties, the deficiency should be made up to the said troops in good lands to be laid off between the rivers Scioto and Little Miami, on the Northwest side of the river Ohio, in such proportion as has been engaged to them by the laws of Virginia.’

“ As it then appears by Mr. Elliot's statement, that the deceased Colonel Elliot was not within the provision contemplated by the act of cession, and the cession was in fact made to, and accepted by, Congress before any grant of lands was made to Colonel Elliot ; the committee are of opinion that the petitioner has no legal or equitable claim to have the said grant of lands, made by the State of Virginia, satisfied out of lands of the United States ; and, therefore, they recommend that he have leave to withdraw his petition.”

The question was taken that the House do agree with the Committee of the Whole House in their disagreement to said report,

And resolved in the affirmative.

The report of the Committee of Claims on the memorial of David Jones and William Rogers, being then read, in the words following, to wit :

“ That they represent that they ‘ had the honor of serving the United States in the capacity of Brigade Chaplains, in the Pennsylvania line, during the Revolutionary war with Great Britain ; and that, as public servants, they think themselves entitled to all the favors and emoluments conferred on the other parts of the Army ;’ that, finding they were not entitled by the former resolution of Congress to military bounty lands, and apprehending the omission was not intentional, they now, in their own behalf, and that of their absent brethren, solicit Congress to grant to the late Chaplains such quantities of land as they may be thought to merit.

"It is understood that the Chaplains regularly appointed to the several brigades of the late Continental Army, and who served till the close of the war, were entitled to, and did receive, the same pay and emoluments as were granted and paid to Lieutenant Colonels in the line of the Army, the right to military bounty lands only excepted.

"When the grants of land were promised by Congress to such officers and soldiers as should engage and actually serve in the Army till the close of the war, it does not appear that it was thought proper or expedient to extend the promise of such grants to the Chaplains, nor does it appear whether the question was or was not agitated. It is presumable that Congress then supposed the encouragement offered to gentlemen to serve in that capacity was sufficient. The committee are of opinion, at this late day, it would not be expedient or advisable to go into a consideration of the subject; and therefore recommend that the petitioners should have leave to withdraw their petition."

The question was taken that the House do agree with the Committee of the Whole House in their agreement to the said report,

And resolved in the affirmative.

On motion,

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a copy of the Speech delivered by the President of the United States to both Houses of Congress, in the Senate Chamber, as followeth:

Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

Immediately after the adjournment of Congress at their last session in Philadelphia, I gave directions, in compliance with the laws, for the removal of the public offices, records, and property: These directions have been executed, and the public officers have since resided and conducted the ordinary business of the Government in this place.

I congratulate the People of the United States on the assembling of Congress at the permanent seat of their Government; and I congratulate you, gentlemen, on the prospect of a residence not to be changed: Although there is cause to apprehend that accommodations are not now so complete as might be wished, yet there is great reason to believe that this inconvenience will cease with the present session.

It would be unbecoming the Representatives of this nation to assemble, for the first time, in this solemn temple, without looking up to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, and imploring his blessing.

May this territory be the residence of virtue and happiness! In this city may that piety and virtue, that wisdom and magnanimity, that constancy and self-government which adorned the great character whose name it bears, be forever held in veneration! Here, and throughout our country, may simple manners, pure morals, and true religion, flourish forever!

It is with you, gentlemen, to consider whether the local powers over the District of Columbia, vested by the Constitution in the Congress of the United States, shall be immediately exercised: If, in your opinion, this important trust ought now to be executed, you cannot fail, while performing it, to take into view the future probable situation of the territory for the happiness of which you are about to provide. You will consider it as the Capital of a great nation, advancing, with unexampled rapidity, in arts, in commerce, in wealth, and in population; and possessing within itself those energies and resources, which, if not thrown away or lamentably misdirected, secure to it a long course of prosperity and self-government.
